

Clinton (Okla.) Daily News, Wednesday, July 20, 2005

Popular BBC Series being made into series of novels

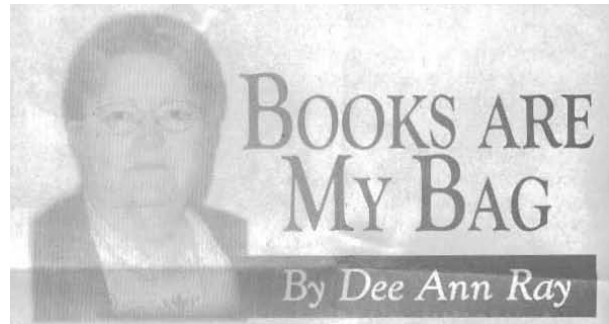

Every reader who enjoys book series about small town life has a treat to anticipate in September of 2005.

Mara Purl's publisher believes she is reinventing the serial novel.

She previously wrote "Milford-Haven, U.S.A." for BBC radio on which it was a "hit." The first of the "Milford-Haven" novels will debut in September of this year and is titled "What the Heart Knows."

To give you a sample of the book from the galley print as a teaser:

In a half-built house high on a bluff overhanging the ocean, beautiful reporter Chris Christian is being murdered, while in an endangered forest overlooking the Cove, Miranda Jones is being chased by a stranger who might be the man of her dreams.

Meanwhile, on Main Street, Sally is dishing up home cooking and perfecting her eavesdropping on everything from Jack Sawyer's nefarious building practices to Zack Calvin's unexplained attraction to Milford-Haven, and she'd give a free basket of fresh, hot biscuits to know the secrets locked away in Samantha Hugo's journal...

This book is being published by Haven Books. It can be ordered through your favorite bookstore or direct from the publisher at 818-503-2518 or www.HavenBooks.net or via e-mail at Reya@HavenBooks.net.